LEESBURG, (VA.) Sept. 12.—The following advertisement has been handed to us by a gentleman of high respectability, who vouches for the authenticity of the facts it contains. We also learn that the horse referred to in the advertisement of the second hands of the sec ment had evidently been forced backwards off the precipice. The transaction has caused much ex-citement in the neighborhood; and there appears much cause to apprehend that the fears entertained are too well founded. [Genius of Liberty. VILLANY—PERHAPS MURDER!

A Horse has been recently found dead at the bottom of a precipice near the summit of the Blue Ridge, a little South of the turnpike in Snickers' Gap. On examining the top of the cliff selecting and rearing the best stock, together with the high reputation acquired by some of them as racers, attracted hither from a distance, a number of the gentlemen of the turf. In order to shew how highly these herses were appreciated, we have about seventy yards from the summit, overhung with huge projecting rocks, against which the an-inal alternately struck in his descent. The first conjectures to which this discovery gave rise, were numerous and various: but several days having elapsed, and no owner appearing, it at length became, and still is, the general opinion, that the owner must have been some unfortunate stranger who had money, and whose body has been concealed by the hand of an assassin: and indeed, when the circumstances connected with the discovery are duly examined and weighed, it appears not un reasonable at least, to fear that this meiancholy conjecture is too well founded. The horse is a bay, with black mane and tail, about 15 hands, shod all round, supposed to be ten years old, and appears to have been a fine gelding.
